Steve Shanewise

This process should be subjected to a Value Engineering Review by an independent firm to see if design elements are appropriate and cost effective. In my view, everything that is being proposed for physical restoration of the estuary habitat is the most difficult, expensive way things could be done.