

Jill Van Hulle

Section 7, regarding the actions for incomplete changes development schedules should clarify what happens in cases where a change has been partially completed. The third bullet hints at one potential outcome, but does not provide a scenario where some of the authorized change has been completed BUT not all and that "unconverted" portion is still in good standing. For example, a partial conversion from irrigation to domestic while the original use continued to use the balance. The policy should state that rights can be partially changed, and the result would be one or more superseding documents that reflects the change (to the extent changed) and the standing of the balance (if still in good standing). Further an applicant can withdraw (cancel) a change authorization in which case the right reverts to the previously issued authorization.