

Timothy Leadingham

I am concerned that moving to a linked market right away, before we even have experience in implementing projects in Washington, could reduce the amount of investment in Washington-based projects, and especially Washington tribal projects. We should have say 10 years of experience in investing funds from our WA auctions within Washington first before we move to a linked market. We should consider linking the market in say 2035 based on a new analysis of the impact on our climate goals, positive or negative.
