I've been a lifelong resident of Washington and have seen the consistent decline in the quality of life, most if not all of the decline is caused by poorly thought out and radical agendas by those who have much to gain, make no mistake, the climate agendas are a business, they use very shaky science to prop up their claims and use pressure tactics to keep the populace in check. We will fail as a state if we keep increasing costs beyond what the average population can afford. Believe that the forces that make this state so rich will abandon this state when you've pushed them to the limits, California is not the state to model any program after, we can still save this state if we have common sense
