We do not need more bureaucracy in this state that adds costs to the already high cost of living and creates undue complexity within our state government. We see how inefficient, bloated and expensive living in this state becomes the more you make regulations under the guise of environmentalism. It ends up becoming some enormous grifting opportunity for a small number of corrupt "in the know" bureaucrats at the expense of every citizen in the entire state, not to mention putting tens of thousands of people out of work.

Washington should decouple from California's radical emissions mandates and pursue smarter, homegrown policies that ease cost-of-living challenges Washington families are facing!
