

Paula Norton

Considering the current economic and social fiasco that is occurring in California right now, why would we want to follow in their footsteps?!!! California's regulations are killing their economy and businesses are fleeing in response. Washington would be very foolish to go down that road. Why do government entities continuously force unnecessary restrictions on businesses but expect those businesses to stay? There has been a great exodus from California and New York State because of unwanted and unnecessary regulations. Think before you act!