

Adam Brown

You are a department of Washington, not elected officials that get to mandate, no we don't have a vote in this state, one party rule right now so mandates, so do not implement the same policies that are now crippling California causing thousands to move out of the state. We are retirees, fixed income and already so many things are unaffordable. We wonder what our future looks like in this state with the rising costs of food, fuel, maintenance items for the home, taxes, insurance. We hear from friends who have moved out of state how much money they have saved and are saving. If you implement this bone-head policy it will increase costs at a time when most of the country is seeing costs go down with the decrease of inflation.