As a registered voter in the State of Washington, I believe Washington state should decouple from California's radical emissions mandates and pursue smarter, homegrown policies that ease cost-of-living challenges Washington families are facing! The track record of similar policies we've mirrored have not provided enough significant success to warrant 'following California'. California can teach Washington what NOT to do! The days of 'group think' and political conformity need to end! Washington taxpayers are drowning in poorly constructed policies and rules, multiple tax increases on food and gas, and losing their homes! Wake up and get smart! Create policies that benefit everyone regardless of culture and financial rank!
