I support further electrification of transportation across WA state, including providing more charging stations, providing subsidies for the lower economic strata to increase their electrification of homes, cars, and businesses, and promoting the transition away from fossil fuels to renewable energy. That includes divesting government finances from financial institutions that promote the growth of research, mining and production of fossil fuels and reinvesting in green energy exploration, expansion, and research. The Federal Government is abandoning all efforts to mitigate the increase of carbon emissions. Our state must pass policies and practices that support green energy and green transportation now, while there is still time. With the withdrawal of federal funds supporting renewable energy, it's important for our state to pick up the slack and become a source of hope and change for the better.
