

Carole Woods

It is difficult to find a fast charging station that is working. Those that exist tend to be abandoned or change ownership frequently, so when we try to use them we don't have the app. Could the state buy and run fast operate charging stations that have been abandoned and, perhaps, make some money?