

Enid Braun

Clean Energy is the only way forward, to address the public health, and economic needs of communities in the face of the destructive of climate change. Our ecological systems are in danger, and this affects natural resources and species, including our own. It was very evident we were moving in the direction that made the most sense, and industry was on board with electric vehicles - with speeding up of support for clean energy - it was effective and it is extremely short sighted and wasteful for the current administration to abort projects already begun. Washington state can and must be a model for other states showing the effectiveness and future- building of good clean energy management. Do not cave to pressure to roll back progress and commitments. I own an electric car - a reasonable Chevy Bolt - and I cannot imagine now going back to gas-guzzlers - I couldn't be happier with this car. I am proud to do my part and proud to be in this state. Please do your part to protect our children's' futures.