I support ZEVergreen. State action on clean transportation is important to me for our community's well-being.

With federal subsidies now gone, the state should "surgically" help subsidize electric vehicles, especially to replace low fuel efficiency vehicles that have high mileage, such as trucks in rural areas. This would largely avoid subsidies going to wealthy people who would buy an EV regardless of price. It would be a bigger carbon savings bang for the buck, and it might increase support for EVs in a wider political spectrum.

thanks,
