

Don Steinke

We need to reduce emissions as much as possible within the next 5-10 years. Do not consider any combustion fuels unless the carbon intensity is guaranteed to be almost zero, now, not in 30 years.

When all emissions are accounted for, biomass, biofuels, and natural gas are as bad as burning coal.

There are two kinds of air pollutants: those that harm health, and those that harm our climate. Our goal is reduce both kinds, not just one of them.