

Lindsey Hamilton

I fully support efforts to transition away from fossil fuels for transportation in Washington State, including making electric vehicles more accessible and affordable. However, I believe we also need to invest much more in fast, reliable public transit, especially along the I-5 corridor. I would gladly use public transportation regularly if it were a practical and efficient option. Expanding transit access is essential for reducing emissions, easing traffic, and ensuring everyone can benefit from a cleaner, more connected future.