As a Washington State constituent, I want to express my strong support for the ZEVergreen effort from the Department of Ecology. Expanding access to zero-emission vehicles is not only critical for reducing pollution and protecting our climate, but it also directly benefits families like mine. My Volkswagen ID.4 saves my household over $200 a month in fuel and maintenance costs, making clean transportation both environmentally responsible and financially practical. Continued investment in this effort will help more Washingtonians access these savings while building a healthier, more sustainable future for our state.
