

Keith Pacheco

Fracking is a very dangerous activity that threatens the quality of life where ever it occurs. It is bad enough when it occurs out in the wilderness and only affects a small number of people. The damage to be done in the Delaware River Basin where more than 7 million people live in parts of four states is unthinkable. How in the world will that many people survive if their drinking water is contaminated? Water is life. Up to 60% of the adult human body is water. We cannot live without clean water. I implore you to ban fracking and ALL associated activities from the basin for the love of life.