

Daniel Hanson

I first came to Delaware River in 1969 when friends and I camped in Narrowburg. Much time has been spent in the area since then in Honesdale, Damascus, Cochection, and Callicoon. The river is central to each of these communities and the tourism the river brings helps keep them alive.

Fracking can dirty the water, sicken the townsfolk (many now my friends) and ruin a beautiful place for everyone. Only the faceless corporations will see economic returns. Everyone else will be a loser in the short and long term. Please ban all hydronic fracturing. Thank you.
