

Richard McNutt

Support 100 percent renewable energy for Pennsylvania

Trump Administration Imposes Tariffs On Imported Solar Panels

Roger Garbey (left) and Andres Hernandez, from the Goldin Solar company, install a solar panel system on the roof of a home in January in Palmetto Bay, Florida. (Joe Raedle/Getty Images)

Children are being born sick and facing the reality of an unsustainable future because of the trail of destruction former generations have left behind. We are all responsible for the future. Widespread and unnecessary pollution can be stopped by shifting toward sustainable energy and altruistic government policy.

Leaders are hungry for more power but not the responsibility that coincides with it. Egotistic policy development needs to be replaced with policy that puts our safety and the well-being of our planet before profit.

If we keep polluting our air, water and land, all living things will be destroyed. We have the technology at our fingertips to make the transition to 100 percent renewable energy in Pennsylvania.

A bill is being considered in the state Legislature to make the move to all-clean energy to power our state by 2050. I am in support of this bill because the dirty fossil fuel industry is dying and we need to think of our future and the responsibility we each have as tenants of this earth. Join me and make your voice heard by contacting your state representatives to support this bill and pave the way for a clean, livable earth for future generations.

Richard H. McNutt

Plumstead Township