

John Sise

I write in support of strict regulation of fracking activities being proposed. The citizens of this area do not need the known pollutants from this activity nor do we want a heightened potential for earthquakes also associated with fracking.

While there are those that say that we need this fossil fuel to survive, I say that if we and our environment are poisoned as fracking will surely do, the need for this fuel is zero.

It is better to use our resources to develop greener sources of energy than to continue using dangerous fossil fuels regardless of the immediate low cost.