

Patricia Willis

I am not an expert regarding fracking, (hydraulic fracturing), but because of what I have read about this process and the damage it causes to ground water and the earth's crust, and the continued damage to the environment from the use of the fossil fuel gas, I strongly oppose the permission of fracking anywhere in Pennsylvania, and especially in the valuable Delaware River Valley. The governor of New York State also has reservations about the safety of this process and has banned its use in that state. Pennsylvania should do the same by enforcing the state constitution's guarantee to all residents for clean air, water and land.