

Michelle Matel

Fracking should be completely banned until more comprehensive studies are conducted relating to health and environmental effects on water supplies. A recent, peer-reviewed study that appeared in Science Advances has shown that infants born to mothers who lived within 1 kilometer of a fracking site were 25% more likely to suffer low birth weights, and an increase in the probability of birth defects.