I've seen hydraulic fracking first hand in Dimock PA in 2014, as I documented (available upon request) all the ill's of the landscape there, which was an awful awakening with methane bubbling creeks, and community water buffalos with farmed in water because wells were also contaminated with methane. No one wants to live like that. Actually eventually it is an unlivable situation, especially when your home is no longer habitable from toxic soil and toxic air quality and you must leave with a gage-order over your head... And we're worried about terrorist. When we have American terrorist corporations who are hijacking our quality of life for the $$$$. Please regard the earth and people and defend laws and policies that bring no harm to human life and our ecosystems. Thank you! Leonora Gerardi
