

William Reitsma

Dear DRBC,

Until fracking can be determined to have no risk to individuals, the most unique and special watershed on the east coast and the waste water from fracking can be completely restored or returned safely to the earth, fracking must be banned. In addition, until the rights of land owners near fracking leases who have their property values drop or water contaminated there is no way that those responsible to protect all constituents who have a stake in the Delaware watershed can do anything but ban this practice. Why would the fracking industry need the Halliburton loop hole if what they did was safe. Our government throws money to them and they profit billions. Stop it now and help force the renewable energy research that the rest of the world is moving ahead of the US in developing. Nothing about it makes sense except the profits of a few. Stand up against and make America great again.