

Christopher Timmins

The Delaware River is an important life source, waterway, and natural preserve for my family who hails from Eastern Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia suburbs. As more rivers are dammed, oceans polluted, lakes devastated, water tables decimated by fracking, and streams drying up, the urgency for protection of rivers becomes paramount to our future population's drinking water and the native species who use Delaware River marshland and waters as breeding grounds. A devastated, barren landscape is what we have in store if we put profit over people and the environment. Please don't be responsible for that kind of future.