

Carol Parowski

The amount of fresh water used for fracking is a threat on it's own to our fresh drinking water, but the amount of fracked waste water that can affect our health is an even larger problem. In addition to the chemicals that are proved injurious to our health, the inability to keep track of the waste water seeping underground or being dumped is reckless. PLEASE do your job of protecting the most basic need for life, our water.