

Susan Madian

Fracking water can destroy the water in the Delaware River and beyond. Even if it is treated, there is no way to know if untested contents might exist and be toxic to humans, wildlife or vegetation. Extracting water for fracking purposes can create shortages. Fracking stored used water can seep into the soil and destroy underground aquapher