

Paul Campion

I am deeply concerned about the impact of removing water for fracking, and then replacing the so-called treated water back into the ground. Take a look at the environmental impact of fracking in southwest Pennsylvania. Now, is that result what you want for our watershed? Fracking companies are notoriously indifferent to quality control and environmental protection. Because we rely on wells for our water, the effects of one bad frack would be disastrous. Vote down this ill-advised plan to ruin our environment with the by-products of fracking.