

Suzanne Day

I've taught environmental science at Temple University, have lived many decades using well water, had a gas pipeline (the "Big Inch") go through my family's farm in Chester County PA when I was a child in the 1940s. Now I'm over 80 and, as an informed citizen who knows clean drinking water is essential for life, I beg you to ban hydraulic fracking throughout the areas of your jurisdiction - the whole Delaware River basin/watershed.

As the regional watchdog, the DRBC is responsible in ways states cannot be separately, and the people, not only the living population but those of future generations, are depending on you to make the right decision - to ban the poisonous practice of fracking to extract gas throughout the Delaware River basin.