

Tommy Hammett

As a local citizen of the Delaware River basin, I am extremely concerned by the fracking that is being done there. The negative impacts on the environment and people around this area greatly outweigh the positives that fracking can bring. This process brings forth unnecessary air and water pollution that can be easily prevented through finding a different process. In addition, it destroys various animal habitats that will harm these populations significantly. Though it can provide temporary gas and oil resources, banning the process of fracking is the best option for sustainable living.