

Colette Tarallo

The Delaware River Basin is the greatest natural resource in my area of the state of NJ. It is home to beautiful wildlife and flora of all kinds. Camping, canoeing and tubing on the Delaware is a favorite pastime that extends through three seasons of the year. Dumping fracking wastewater into the waters there could cause irreparable damage to the animals, plants and people who depend on the river and decimate the recreational businesses along its banks, as well as the businesses that tourists visit while in the area. People who live in the area could get sick, and it isn't known what could happen to future generations of all life forms there. PLEASE consider another solution for disposal of fracking wastewater.