

Nathan McCourt

The Delaware River Basin is very important to the community and fracking is negatively impacting the area as well as the body of water. Fracking is contaminating the water and is affecting people's households and the necessary resources we need. Fracking is still a very questionable method and we do not know the full consequences that may hurt the environment in the future.