

Chris Scheibe

I have worked in the oil and gas industry for over thirty years. I can not even comprehend dumping water from oil and gas wells in any water way is being considered. It is the nastiest thing I can imagine to do to kill a water way. The production of oil and gas wells is a dirty business. It does not matter how regulated it is. Things that end up in the ground on purpose and by accident, you would not want on your boots, let alone in a public water source. If this is allowed to happen, this reservoir and the down stream water ways WILL be lost for any other use. To allow this to happen is evidence of those considering it, they do not have the knowledge or the personnel to direct these drastic decisions in an informed or experienced manner. Just to suggest dumping oil and gas bi products in water ways is a violation of the public trust.