This is a greatly flawed plan. The waste is essentially harmful to both wildlife and human life. Both Boysen and Big Horns are beautiful locations with nature still largely intact and unaffected by pollution. If this plan goes through, the water quality will be reduced, therefore causing negative and unwanted effects on agriculture, tourism, and the wildlife. It has been proven many times that polluted water kills the life within it, and if it doesn't, it becomes diseased, and this will sicken those who (and what) drink and feed off it. Wyoming deserves better treatment than this, and many will agree! I oppose this plan. Sincerely, Hali Wise
