

Amy Nagler

Wyoming waters are too precious to pollute. The cost of clean-up could far outweigh benefits to energy companies that will get a free dumping ground at the expense of everyone else who depends on water for drinking, agriculture, and recreation.