

Robyn Rofkar

Atheon should be accountable for treating all its wastewater, just like the other waste water that it produces. If it wants to increase production of contaminated waste water, it is just common sense that it needs to increase its treatment facilities. Please, PLEASE do not consider this arcane "dillution" theory. These toxic contaminants will eventually impact the quality of Boysen Reservoir (a recreation and fishing mecca), Wind River Canyon (a blue ribbon trout fishing area), the BigHorn River (providing irrigation water and drinking water) as well as everything downstream. Energy companies do not need to bypass ethical waste regulations - they have the means to release only treated waste water. I'm actually appalled that their request was already approved. There are MANY people that want this approval rescinded. Hold them accountable to keep our Wyoming environment as toxin-free as possible. Thank you!