

Sheena Hixson

Please don't allow poison Boysen reservoir! The people who live in Wyoming will be the ones who pay dearly for the careless actions of some big energy company, especially with such loose regulations in place. Big energy companies like Aethon aren't going to love up to what is ethical if it cuts into their profit, at least not unless there are strict regulations in place that force them to behave ethically. Dumping poisoned water into Boysen Reservoir is going to have an impact on the wildlife, the fishing, the camping, any tourism revenue, and the entire ecosystem in the surrounding area, as well as miles downstream. Not to mention the impacts to human health and safety downstream... And we ALL love downstream.

It is the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality's job to protect the Wyoming environment, correct? I don't understand how allowing Aethon to dispose of millions of gallons upon gallons of minimally treated waste water is "maintaining the quality of the environment" of Boysen.

Please, before you approve this proposal, think about the people who live here, the people who use Boysen as a family vacation spot... Would you want a big energy company dumping their waste water in your childhood fishing hole? Would you want your kids swimming in that water in the summer? Would you want that water flowing downstream into your tap?