Since Boysen is a Federal reservoir and not Wyoming's, I feel obligated to object to any discharge into the reservoir by Aethon. The only reason to discharge into the reservoir is quite obvious, its simply cheaper than containing pollutants on site. Dumping in the reservoir is simply an outta site outta mind ploy. Likewise the science provided by the company and State is unproven and the long-term consequences are at best a guess. So when the company abandons the project at some future date or goes bankrupt and the reservoir is no longer safe for humans and wildlife, the public will be have to pay for the cleanup.

Aethon should process and contain the pollutants on site. If its too expensive then the entire project is marginal to begin with.

In the long term, Aethon will take the resources and profits and leave Wyoming.
