I believe the Wyoming DEQ should approve this permit for several reasons. First and foremost is that the water is being used for agricultural purposes and also enhance the wild life habitat in the area. By the time the water makes it to Boysen and down the Wind River it has been diluted even more. Lander, Hudson and Riverton all discharge their sewers into the same watershed and those waters are also diluted into the system. By the time all of this takes place in 5 years time there will probably be newer technology in place to clean up the water even more.
