It is way passed time to end this permit process and allow the Brook Mine to proceed. It should not take almost a decade to receive a mining permit. In addition, this particular permit has been through a more stringent application process than what current rules stipulate. Kudos to Ramaco for going above and beyond what is required and for sticking with the project for this long. Most people would have given up and taken their money where it is welcome! Wyoming needs to do better by simplifying the permit process and shortening the maximum length of time these can get dragged on. Environmental organizations with endless amounts of out of state cash are abusing the process to drag these out indefinitely and bleeding companies dry to the point where they just give up. That is unacceptable. Please approve this permit and let's get Sheridan County working again.
