Since the needs of re-introducing Wolves has not been met, how can you plan on post-recovery? You should focus on why one rancher has so many predations take place to his herd. Are his cattle left out all winter? Are they healthy? Are they in a safe location?

Why are cattle in a prime Wolf relocation area?

Please educate the public as to the benefits of healthy apex predators in our wild places. Cattle should not be given preference to the point that you allow the destruction of one entire pack, for this shoddy rancher, who pays pennies on the acre to neglect his cattle.

I grew up on a small, 200 acre cattle farm, near Fort Lewis in the 60s, and this abuse by irresponsible ranchers just continues to this day.

Thank you for consideration of my comments.
