Our planet deeply needs the two legged top predators, also known as humans, to cease and desist in their fairytale demonization of wolves. Balance is already desperately skewed because of our mindless depredations from centuries of "growth". We need wolves, thriving packs of them to balance the degradation caused by rampant expansion of system trampling ungulates. Celebrate the resilience of returning wolf packs! Public lands are just that and scores of members of that public want those lands wild not exploited by profiteering despoilers and their "free ranging herds".
