

Elaine Becker

SHAME! STOP THE SLAUGHTER!

Use SCIENCE FACTS, not Rancher superstition, when making decisions. Factual studies show that the majority of wolves' diets are small animals, like rabbits and rodents. The only large prey they can successfully take are injured, elderly or ill. The entire ecosystem suffers when native predators are removed. Small prey overpopulate and overgraze, causing groundcover loss and soil erosion, leading to widespread disease and starvation.