

Chris Drumright

Wolves are an amazing keystone species that are very sentient and extremely important in their role in their ecosystems. Recovery plans are very necessary to keep them around. Wolves have a better family dynamic than many people I've seen. I implore you to have the right attitude of compassion and preservation. The government is doing more and more to strip any protections for animals and the environment. They need positive measures taken to ensure their future.