

Darci Fraser

The wolves have balanced our environment for as long as there have been wolves. When an issue arrives, as in livestock, we blame the wolves and as a society have deemed anything that we don't want we must remove. That is how we unbalanced the environment originally. Maybe some of the responsibility should be shared with our society and not all be put on wolves. We live in the northwest because of the beautiful land but we must share it with the environment first. "