

Matt Herrera

I have personally seen wolves in ferry co, pierce co, Spokane co, Garfield co and kittitas co.

Every place that I have whitenesses wolves they have grown in numbers as the surrounding game populations of game animals shrink.

We do not have the shiras moose, elk or mule deer to loose in these counties!

Moose in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho have gone from strong and stable to on the brink of destruction. Theses places have much stronger game populations to feed wolves and much more wild country to allow the wolves to disperse and not have such a direct impact.

The states who have elected to use hunters as a wolf management tool, have not been able to curb the growth of the wolf populations, nor have they been able to offset the negative impacts the correspond game populations. Please allow Washington to learn from others mistakes and implement strong management strategies now!

Please help the wildlife in wa before it is too late, and Allow Hunters to manage wolves now!
