

Dear Lisa ~

Woof.

Your "post-recovery" plan should include better nonviolent conflict resolution training for Diamond M Ranch in particular, + a public awareness campaign. Melinda

Dog

Humans smile, dogs wag. Researchers have discovered that just as people rarely smile when alone, dogs need the company of people or other animals to set their tails a-waggin'. And if you're worried about dog bites, pretend you aren't. It's true that a dog is far less likely to snap at a human who shows no sign of fear.
