

David Carney

This will obviously be a controversial subject, and I can live with whatever is decided. I am no longer a Washington resident, but continue to hunt there as a non-resident.

I lived in Alaska for 47 years, and trapped there for most of those years. I was a successful wolf trapper, and student of wolf behavior.

I guess I just want to say that whatever is decided, it would be impossible to eliminate wolves from Washington, and they will need control. Allowing them to be hunted would be a good start.
