

Darren Bradley

If the state wants super predators in Washington expect a multitude of problems as wolves can't be contained or controlled near human presence.

The economic costs will far outweigh the need for a symbolic introduction of wolves for management in my opinion.

An economic study should be considered long before implementing a uncontrollable predator.