

Butch Schwindt

Because of the population growth of the wolves, they should not only be de-listed from the endangered list, there should now be a hunting season, as well as laws designed for the rancher/farmer to eliminate the threat to livestock. I'm still appalled by the amount of money and time we all (both sides of the viewpoints) spend on this species when the problems we have with homelessness, housing, drug addiction is still growing and not being addressed. Why are we more worried about wolves than our fellow man? Why would we have wolves on the west side of the state when they were never there to begin with? What are the ramifications of that? The rule of common sense and taking care of our fellow mankind is so distorted today; Let's get together and get focused on the necessary areas the bible, and our forefathers meant for us to make priorities, and let mother nature take care of the wildlife, and let it evolve as it goes.