

Linda Rolf

The WDFW needs to bring authentic to the table. WDFW always sides with ranchers and that had led to the deaths of dozens of wolves. What are the ranchers doing to protect their own property? I think they do nothing and then complain once a calf dies. How are the wolves to know what to do when the cattle are running around in their territory without supervision.

Then there is Len McIrvin who is responsible for killing 4 packs of wolves. Every time he complains, you load the guns and get the helicopter out. It costs over $100,000 to kill wolves from helicopters. You're lucky the taxpayers don't pay too much attention on how you spend their money.

McIrvin also has demanded to graze his cattle right next to a wolf den. If ranchers can't show some intelligence, they shouldn't be able to kill packs of wolves. Close that area and send McIrvin's cattle elsewhere. It's a one way street now with the ranchers calling the shots. Ranchers need to be monitored to make sure they are doing their jobs.